

Part 3: “Who, Edwin? Yeah, I’ve seen the guy around before, has a habit of turning up in the seedier parts of town. Last time I saw him was in the back alley behind the Phoenix’s Nest, at least I think. Been known to chase the dragon, you know what I mean? Why you lookin’ for him anyways? He welch on a bet or something?”

You mention something vague about a poker game and thank the young man for his time, though you’re not particularly happy about the news. Chinatown’s always been an interesting place to visit, at least, it was, until your run in with the local tong over a missing person a few years back. Since then, you’ve tried to avoid spending any more time than necessary in the near east. Unfortunately, it looks like if you’re going to get the rest of your payment, you’re going to have to find whatever opium joint Edwin’s been napping in lately. Who knows, maybe if you lay low, you can find him without any trouble. Whether or not trouble’s managed to find Edwin though, is another thing entirely.
