

Charles Ackland

Police Surgeon

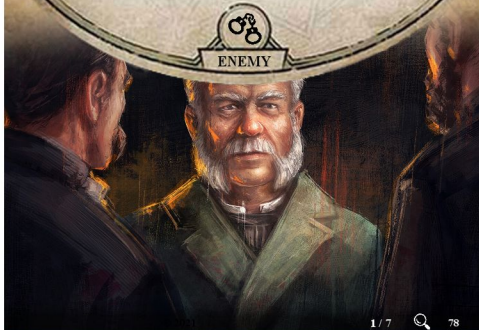

Suspect

Spawn – Bucks Row

►: Parley. Test (3) to cross examine Charles Ackland. If you succeed, take control of 1 of the clues on Charles Ackland.

Forced – When the last clue is removed from Charles Ackland: Flip this card over and resolve its text.

1 / 7 78

Charles Ackland

Charles Ackland seems irritated by your questions at first, but grows more annoyed as you ask for his whereabouts over the last few days. You learn he performed several routine autopsies and made just as many house calls. "Any fool with a modicum of skill could have committed those foul deeds." He seems more than a little put out at the notion he may have had something to do with the murders. "You'll need to interview every surgeon and butcher in the East End of London. There are many people in this city that are skilled with a blade. The Royal Surgeon often works this area. Perhaps you should speak to him".

Remember that you "cross-examined Charles Ackland".

Place this card next to your play area.

STORY

Francis Tumblety

Doctor

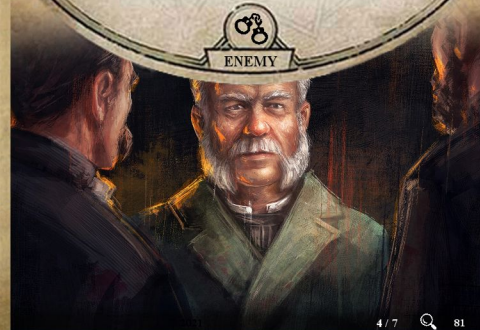

Suspect

Spawn – Hanbury Street

►: Parley. Test (2) to cross examine Francis Tumblety. If you succeed, take control of 1 of the clues on Francis Tumblety.

Forced – When the last clue is removed from Francis Tumblety: Flip this card over and resolve its text.

4 / 7 81

Francis Tumblety

Dr Francis Tumblety seems only too happy to indulge you in your line of questioning. "Yes, I am a doctor which means I have a vast Knowledge in medicine and skill-set that makes me capable of committing the crimes you speak of". You press Mr Tumblety on his whereabouts on the nights of the murders. "I was at home with my wife, I was delivering a baby and I was god knows where? It doesn't matter. I am physically and professionally capable of being one of your suspects but I am just not mentally proficient in the art of murder." You thank Mr Tumblety for his time. "I hope you are speaking to surgeons as well as doctors? Police and royal alike, were all suspects with the know-how and means to commit these horrible acts".

Remember that you "cross-examined Francis Tumblety".

Place this card next to your play area.

STORY

George Lusk

Socialist Agitator

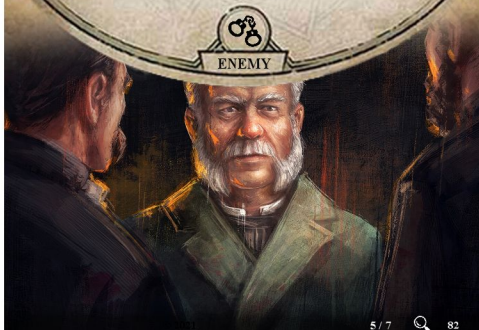

Suspect

Spawn – Old Castle Street

►: Parley. Test (4) to cross examine George Lusk. If you succeed, take control of 1 of the clues on George Lusk.

Forced – When the last clue is removed from George Lusk: Flip this card over and resolve its text.

5 / 7 82

George Lusk

You can tell George Lusk is a man with an agenda from the passionate way he speaks "The East End is in turmoil. People are being killed and the police have no control. It's the work of a butcher!" You interrupt Mr Lusk's rant before he says something he might regret. You point out to him that running a vigilante committee and hounding others with no real proof isn't the way to go about things. He shakes his head in vigorous disagreement. "If the police did their jobs then I wouldn't have to speak out for the people! and before you ask, I had nothing to do with any killings. There's easily a hundred men that could vouch for my whereabouts". You thank Mr Lusk for his time, with a friendly warning that if he persists with the organised protests and finger pointing, he'll end up in the cells. You consider it wouldn't be a bad idea as a killer to masquerade as someone in a crowd looking for yourself.

Remember that you "cross-examined George Lusk".

Place this card next to your play area.

STORY

James Maybrick

Butcher

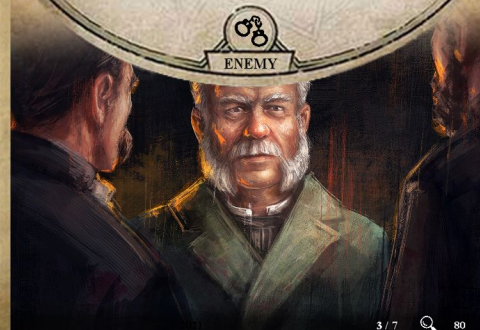

Suspect

Spawn – Gunthorpe Street

►: Parley. Test (4) to cross examine James Maybrick. If you succeed, take control of 1 of the clues on James Maybrick.

Forced – When the last clue is removed from James Maybrick: Flip this card over and resolve its text.

3 / 7 80

James Maybrick

As you question the butcher, he seems slightly shaken and even confused. "There's no sense in it! I'm just a butcher trying to make an honest living to feed my family". He pauses for a moment gathering his composure. "This is a terrible business but I swear I've had no part of it. I heard the stories about a piece of leather apron found at a crime scene. All butchers wear them... we have to". Satisfied with his response, you seem fairly certain he's telling the truth. He looks at you sternly. "It's not right, people pointing fingers and blaming folk. I've been harassed by that vigilante lot and my wife is scared to walk the streets during the day never mind at night. How do you know its not one of them doing these murders?". You assure Mr Maybrick you are doing all you can to bring the killer to justice and restore order in the streets.

Remember that you "cross-examined James Maybrick".

Place this card next to your play area.

STORY

John Netely

Coach Driver

X

X

X

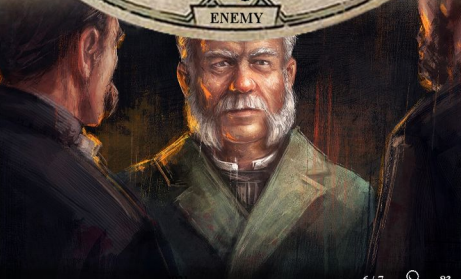

Suspect

Spawn – Dorset Street

►: Parley. Test ♠ (3) to cross examine John Netely. If you succeed, take control of 1 of the clues on John Netely.

Forced – When the last clue is removed from John Netely: Flip this card over and resolve its text.

ENEMY

6 / 7 83

Sir William Gull

Royal Surgeon

X

X

X

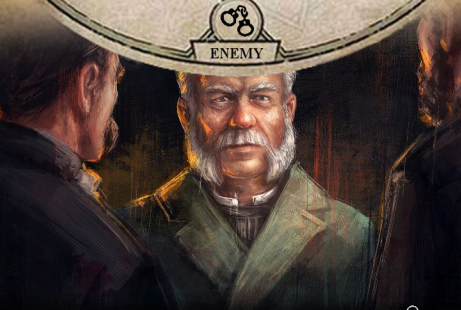

Suspect

Spawn – Berner Street

►: Parley. Test ♠ (3) to cross examine Sir William Gull. If you succeed, take control of 1 of the clues on Sir William Gull.

Forced – When the last clue is removed from Sir William Gull: Flip this card over and resolve its text.

ENEMY

2 / 7 79

John Netely

Speaking with John Netely, you discover that he not only has access to the Royal Coach Mews but is also studying to be a surgeon. Coincidence? "They've been very helpful at the hospital, especially that William Gull fella. Very encouraging". You enquire about his most recent whereabouts. "He scoffs. "Probably anywhere around the East End. I've many passengers during the week. If I wasn't working late, I'd have been tucked up in bed or studying you see". You notice throughout the conversation Mr Netely seems quite calm maintaining eye contact the whole time. "It's a terrible business those killings. I imagine you've got your work cut out finding the killer. If you need taken anywhere urgently, I'm your man. Happy to help". You thank Mr Netely for his time and leave wondering. If perhaps he has aided a killer without knowing it or if he was compliant the whole time?

Remember that you "cross-examined John Netely"

Place this card next to your play area.

STORY

Sir William Gull

It doesn't take long for Sir William Gull to open up to your line of questions. "What kind of a man can do that"? He hands you back the crime photograph. "A psychopath, a mentally deranged person. I've never seen anything like this before." You ask how such a person could be recognized. Sir William pauses for a moment. "It's won't be easy, he'll probably appear quite normal until his insanity rears its head". After suggesting that the killer may have had some form of medical knowledge in relation to the killings, Mr Gull seems surprised. "Surely your not suggesting the killer was a doctor or surgeon? Were trained to save lives not destroy them!" You leave Sir William with his last words still ringing in your ears. "Any fool with a knife is capable of such things".

Remember that you "cross-examined Sir William Gull"

Place this card next to your play area.

STORY

Robert Lees

Clairvoyant

X

X

X

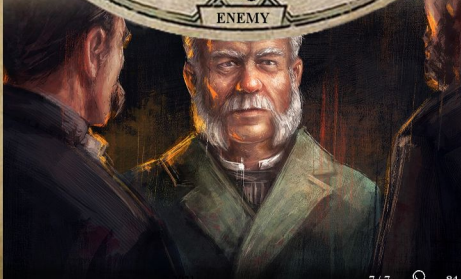

Suspect

Spawn – Mitre Square

►: Parley. Test ♠ (3) to cross examine Robert Lees. If you succeed, take control of 1 of the clues on Robert Lees.

Forced – When the last clue is removed from Robert Lees: Flip this card over and resolve its text.

ENEMY

7 / 7 84

Robert Lees

"I didn't have a choice!" Mr Lees cries. "The things I've seen... They can't be unseen. So much blood and destruction. Those poor women". Asking about his visions, you suggest the trouble with the 'spirit world' is they always tell you after the event and never before it. Quite affronted by such a comment, Mr Lees's mood quickly changes. "I came to the police remember! I've served the queen for many years now, I cannot control what I see. The visions just come to me without warning. You have to find him, there will be more killings. Realizing you may have overstepped the mark, you leave Mr Lees to his own thoughts. You wonder if such a man could be capable of murder.

Remember that you "cross-examined Robert Lees"

Place this card next to your play area.

STORY